

CREATIVE PROCESS

INITIAL CLIENT MEETING(S) We discuss your vision and inspirations. We explore any potential utilitarian aspects of the artwork, such as climbing walls, seating etc. We establish budgets and timeframes.

FIRST DRAFT REVIEW We submit the initial draft of the design to you for review and, in certain situations, for possible public input. We answer any questions you may have regarding the design, both technical and aesthetic. Together we establish any alterations that are needed for the design.

FINAL DRAFT REVIEW After changes have been made, and any technical questions have been addressed, we present you with the final design draft. After final approval, we send the design to our artists for carving and finishing.

CREATION Our stone craftsmen have decades of experience rendering art in stone. They use the opportunities to allow individual stones to speak to them, and guide them towards the enhancement of what nature provided. During fabrication, our craftsmen will consult with you if an opportunity arises during the process, but will always stay true to the approved design and vision. It is a dynamic and creative process that makes each piece of stone art truly unique.

FINISHING TOUCHES After the final carvings are approved, we install any bronze statues or plaques. Other elements that may be incorporated include painting, metalwork or climbing grips, along with any finish masonry and polishing.

INSTALLATION We have over 40 years' experience in the transportation and expert installation of large stone monuments. We will ensure that your finished artwork is carefully and permanently placed, to be enjoyed by many future generations.
